Can these young people take on the future?
WE THINK SO!

The Class of 2000

When these students graduate, they will be the first to walk into the 21st century.

You can't become a member of the Class of 2000 like you'd join a fraternity.

There's no unique preparation. You can't train, athletically, for the event. You can't take a test.

It's an exclusive group - the Class of 2000. There's just one way to become part of it - it's your birthright. You have to be in the right place at the right time. Like members of other special classes at Maryville College, the Class of 2000 serves as a symbolic marker on a time line. Like members of the Class of 1919 - the College's 100 year anniversary, or members of the Class of 1976 - the country's Bicentennial, members of the Class of 2000 serve as shining beacons of the College's ideal set forth by its fifth President Samuel Tyndale Wilson and reiterated by current President Gerald Gibson. That ideal is "to be beyond all question, the best possible college." The following students will help the College reach that goal in the next four years.

T. J. Emory

Students like T.J. Emory will help the College reach its goal. A biology major from Loudon, TN - a small town located just a few miles west of the College - Emory says he has developed a strong sense of pride about the College in three short, but very hectic, months he has been on campus.

"I chose to come to MC because of its long, outstanding academic reputation," he says. Emory wants to become a physical therapist upon graduation. The College's biology program will serve as excellent preparation. He knew this, he says, because of the College's ranking in the top tier among small, private, liberal arts colleges in a recent U.S. News and World Report survey.

Emory is also contributing to the growth and development of the College outside the classroom. He serves as a member of the Hall Council for Gamble Hall and he plays football for the Fighting Scots.

"I actually feel I am a part of the campus community," he says. "The campus is beautiful and is a relaxing place to live and go to school. I feel like I am at home."

Folami Ford

Folami Ford, from Lanham, MD, also feels at home at MC. She chose to come to the College to study in its renowned sign language interpreting program.

Ironically, she says, MC was the last of seven schools to which she applied. Now, she feels, she saved the best for last.

Ford says she is struck by the friendliness of the people in the MC campus community. "The people continue to amaze me with their pleasant smiles and cheery 'good mornings.' I look around the campus and see faces that I actually recognize. That is quite an accomplishment for a freshman!"

Ford was also impressed by the College's U.S. News rankings. Since arriving on campus, she has been equally enthusiastic about experiences like the College's Community Forum series and Mountain Challenge activities.

"Maryville's curriculum is geared to developing the whole student, not just giving them a meaningless degree. So far, Maryville has more than lived up to my expectations of what college should be like."

Maxim Williams

Max Williams looked at a number of large colleges before he found MC. The decision, he says, was absolutely perfect for him. "I preferred to attend a small school. I do not see myself feeling comfortable or connected at such large schools. At MC, I am able to more closely interact and seek assistance from my professors and fellow classmates."

A psychology major, he has become very active on campus in the two months since convocation. He is a member of Fellowship of Christian Athletes and the Black Student Association. A Bonner Scholar, he is also participating in the Special Olympics and Habitat for Humanity. He is also a member of Circle K.

Williams is originally from Toronto, Canada. He comes to MC from Port Charlotte, Florida. He hopes to eventually become a Ph.D. psychologist.

In the meantime, though, he is enjoying life as a college student.

"Maryville College seems to be a place where I can receive a quality education and develop into a more well-rounded individual. That's a good combination."

Crissy Wieck

Crissy Wieck is a double major in history and business from Nashville.

Since she comes from a small high school, she was intrigued by MC's student-teacher ratio of 14:1.

"The curriculum is challenging, but I haven't been overwhelmed. It's a tough school, but everyone is great."

Outside the classroom, she is a member of the soccer team. And, like many of her classmates, she says she loves the mountains that surround the College. Those mountains serve as a theme that reverberates through the history of the College.

Dr. Ralph Waldo Lloyd, the College's sixth President, drew inspiration from the view of the mountains he could see outside his window. Further, the mountains are mentioned in the opening stanza of the College's alma mater - "Where Chilhowee's lofty mountains pierce the southern blue proudly stands our alma mater, noble, grand and true..."

Even on the brink of the new century, the College continues to stand noble, grand and true. The College will enter its third century adhering to the ideals set forth by its leaders of a different generation.

But it is this generation - Emory and Ford... Williams and Wieck... that will lead this College into the new millennium. It is this group of student leaders that will help the College become "beyond all question, the best possible College..."

One day in the near future, Maryville High School graduate Clint Wight hopes to be treating hometown patients as a family practice physician.

His current research, as a senior chemistry major at Maryville College, is an important part of the foundation on which his career as a physician will stand. Under the direction and guidance of Dr. Terry Bunde, Professor of Chemistry, Wight is completing his senior thesis - the capstone project of research for Maryville College students since 1947.

The hands-on research project, combining the expertise of a dedicated faculty member - Bunde - and the curiosity and exuberance of a college student - Wight - forms the relationship which has made the senior thesis a key element of Maryville's liberal arts education for half a century.

Many students and many professors have enjoyed such a relationship over the decades. In fact, a significant number of Maryville graduates have built careers around or because of the senior thesis project. Many of them say it is an invaluable element of the Maryville College experience.

Inspiration and Serendipity

Some of the best research projects at Maryville come together through a combination of inspiration, hard work and chance. Wight's research project illustrates such a combination. Long before Wight enrolled at the College, Bunde had learned of a gift the College would receive from the Perkin-Elmer Corporation - a Perkin-Elmer LS3/B Fluorescence Spectrophotometer. The gift commemorated the retirement from Perkin-Elmer of long-term chemist, Bill Hargrave '43, himself a chemistry graduate of the College.

"I was thrilled by the gift," Bunde says. "But, I wasn't quite sure how we would use it."

The total gift ($50,000) included two spectrometers and a high performance liquid chromatograph. Bunde wrote to the company and asked for some manuals detailing the various applications for the new equipment. Soon, he and his students began using the fluorescence instrument in his biochemistry laboratory sequence.

Another Alumnus Helps

Another chemistry graduate, Lance Klosterman '95 had a tremendous interest in the combination of chemistry and computers. His senior thesis project involved networking the instruments in the Major Instruments Laboratory to a single computer to facilitate data collection and analysis.

"The result," Bunde says "is that we can now download raw spectral data and use spreadsheets, graphics software and a plotter program to prepare final spectra which can then be incorporated directly into student senior thesis documents and which are suitable for seminar presentations.

"It has helped us to present a senior thesis in a much more sophisticated way."

Klosterman, incidentally, has continued to develop his interest in computers and science. He, is currently a medical school student, who has spent this past summer doing research in medical imaging using a computer intensive medical diagnostic procedure.

More Pieces to the Puzzle

Wight began to formulate ideas for a research project during a biochemistry class.

"I have come into this research project with a much more broadened view of how this instrumental technique can be applied to biochemical problems."

As he used spectroscopy in the coursework, he found that fluorescence was a way to explore his ideas.

As Wight began to develop his ideas for a senior thesis project, Bunde was interviewing for a sabbatical leave position at the Oak Ridge National Laboratory. Bunde worked for six months in the lab of Dr. Tuan Vo-Dinh during the 1996 spring semester. Much of Bunde's work dealt with the topic that Wight would be researching - synchronous fluorescence studies of proteins.

Since Bunde was conducting research in this area during his sabbatical, Wight saw the opportunity to continue the process of knowledge-base building at the College. Another current student, Matt Wilks, is beginning his senior thesis study working with Bunde in the same research area.

Specifically, Wight's research investigates the effects of pH changes, the presence of salts and the chaotropic agent urea on the conformational changes of three proteins. Using synchronous fluorescence spectroscopy, Wight will monitor changes in the three-dimensional shape of the three proteins.

"It is purely serendipity that the two of us would wind up doing the same type of research," Bunde says.

Adds Wight, "We have been able to feed off each other's ideas, basically."

Bunde adds "I never would have thought a six month sabbatical would have been so rejuvenating. I have come into this research project with a much more broadened view of how this instrumental technique can be applied to biochemical problems."

Other Senior Theses

It's not unusual to find such a close partnership between faculty and student researchers in a chemistry senior thesis project - or in other theses across campus, for that matter. Bunde says many chemistry-related senior thesis projects focus on the fields of organic, environmental, analytical and biochemistry.

And, for students who plan to teach high school chemistry, there is a major track in chemistry which works well. Many Chemistry for Teacher Licensure students work on senior research projects where they introduce chemistry software and hardware into the high school chemistry curricula or laboratory.

It's a practical, hands-on approach that will benefit these future chemistry teachers once they enter the classroom or the laboratory.

The Wight Experiment

Meanwhile back in the laboratories at MC, Wight's research moves forward.

He is completing his research on protein denaturation by investigating another spectral technique, Fourier Transform Infrared Spectroscopy, that may be used to monitor the unfolding process.

And, as Bunde has opened the door through his affiliation with ORNL, other research possibilities are beginning to develop for future generations of chemistry students at the College.

"Most students see the senior thesis and senior comprehensive exams as the final hurdles that they must clear to receive their diplomas," Bunde says. "As they begin the senior thesis research, they find that more questions are raised than they could ever answer in a two-semester project."

"They begin to appreciate that the senior thesis is the first small step in a process of individual, life-long learning. Clint's senior thesis, during which we both had the intellectual opportunity to mutually explore new experimental techniques and areas of biochemistry research, is not unique but rather a common experience across the campus for student-faculty projects. We, as a chemistry faculty, are committed to this kind of individual student-faculty research project as the capstone experience for our majors. And our increasing enrollments are testament to our success."

Hands-On Learning For Both.*

Strategic Management

MC Classes not only teach, but also enrich lives.

As Pat Rogers was winding up her senior year last December, she was enrolled in a strategic management class, Business 401. The class is required of all business majors and taught by Associate Professor of Management Dr. Mary Kay Sullivan. Although many students exhibit "senioritis" during their last semester in school and tend to coast for their last few months, Rogers did not have that experience in Sullivan's course.

One reason why Rogers stayed on her toes is because Sullivan invited a group of area business chief executive officers to the final day of class for a capstone event in the management major. According to Sullivan, Maryville College is the only undergraduate college in the country to offer such an event, in lieu of a final exam, to its students.

As required by the course, Rogers and all of her classmates divided into teams which then researched and analyzed a local company and made a presentation on the results of the analysis to the panel of CEOs. The teams took on the role of management consultants and produced documentation and visuals to support their presentation.

The CEOs rated the teams on the work they did, and on how well they presented it. Although the CEOs were not affiliated with the company being studied in class, they acted as its board of directors and brought general knowledge of the business world to the class.

Rogers is now employed by the Tennessee Valley Authority as an assistant for the Internship Program. She helps Dr. Gail Mosby of TVA administer the internship and scholarship program. She views the experience she had in class last year as beneficial. "I think it's of great benefit," says Rogers. "Most businesses now take a team approach with presentations as a part of routine business, and you have to be able to think on your feet. The executives ask a lot of the class and you get experience fielding questions. You get an understanding of what you'll be expected to know."

Rogers says the CEOs asked her classmates very interesting, probing questions. "I think they surprised some of the students by the depth of their questions."

Sullivan has been utilizing the expertise of area businessmen and women for five years now, and feels strongly that the program has merit. "The program is a great motivator to students to avoid senioritis," she says, "and some of our students have received job offers or established business connections from their experience." Sullivan has a number of objectives for her classroom scenario. First and foremost, she wants to present a challenging learning situation to her students. This is a way to bring together what they have learned at Maryville College. They draw on the content they have learned in their major field of study as well as use their research skills, their analytical skills, and their oral presentation skills.

"I think our alumni would be quite pleased to see how thoughtful our students' analyses are and how articulate and poised they are in their presentations."

Secondly, she wants to expose students to the "real world" beyond the classroom. They apply what they have learned in class to a "real world" setting in a way that helps refine their speaking and writing skills.

And finally, she wants CEOs in the area and beyond to see what outstanding students are enrolled at MC. "The response from the visiting CEOs has been overwhelmingly positive," says Sullivan, "they are tremendously impressed with the ability of our students. The students really rise to the occasion and I am so very proud of them."

The names of the executives who have participated in Sullivan's class reads like a Who's Who in business in East Tennessee. Twenty-eight have participated to date with four more on board for this semester. Steve Coleman, President of Anderson Lumber Company; Harwell W. Proffitt '40, former CEO of Proffitt's Department Stores; Baxter Lee, Chairman of the Board & CEO of Southeast Service Corporation; and Joan Allen, Chairman of Aztec Enterprises are scheduled for class in December.

MC Board member Michael Campbell, Chairman and President of Regal Cinemas of Knoxville, is a former panel participant for Sullivan's class. He speaks highly of the experience, both from his perspective and from the students'. "I knew Dr. Sullivan before I became a member of the College's board of directors," says Campbell, "and I was impressed with her effervescence and enthusiasm. When she asked me to be a panel member for her class I did not hesitate to agree. I enjoyed watching the young people getting that first experience of business."

After the presentations, Campbell spoke with some of the class members and got to know them. He was so impressed with one young man, he even offered him a job. As a further result of his involvement with the class, Campbell is willing to offer internships to MC marketing, accounting or business majors. He adds, "I think it's a good program...the size of the classes permits them to do what they do."

Given the success of the class, Sullivan plans to continue the format, but she does not want to limit participation to East Tennessee. She notes, "If MC alumni would be interested in coming to town to participate in this event at some time in the future, please have them contact me at 423/981-8234."

"I think our alumni would be quite pleased to see how thoughtful our students' analyses are and how articulate and poised they are in their presentations."

Step by Step

Picture this: a band of face-painted, garnet-clad crazies, whoopin' and hollerin' their way from Anderson Hall across campus to Honaker Field.

Does that set the tone for a crisp autumn afternoon in the shadow of Chilhowee's Lofty Mountains or what?

That's spirit.

A total of 177 years, 10 presidents and more than 7,000 alumni.

That's tradition.

MC Student Senate President Jason Thompson and a group of his senators have heard that charge and they have taken it to heart. Thompson, who won election last spring by promising to 'put the student back into student senate' is now trying to return the by-gone traditions of another era to the students of Maryville College who are poised to take the College into a new century.

That charge has excited the students who form Senate's Spirit and Traditions Committee.

New Traditions

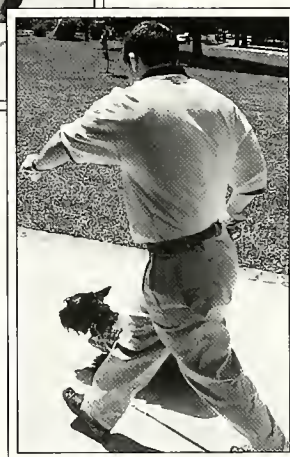

The first goal of this committee was to accomplish a Thompson initiative to gather a band of spirit-filled MC students just before kickoff of home football games. The students get together at Anderson Hall and wind their way across campus. On the first such occasion, they were joined by the College's first couple, Dr. Gerald Gibson and his wife Rachel. They brought along their Scottish terrier, Lady, who actually 'led' the group into the stadium.

"It was quite a start," Thompson said. "We actually had 20 or so students who met us that day. Eventually, we hope that group grows. There's no limit to school spirit."

Another twist was the addition of another Scottie, a yet-to-be-named mascot that made its debut at homecoming. The costumed character, purchased by Senate, might even don an oversized jersey for different sports.

The mascot will hopefully add to the craze of rabid MC football fans on beautiful October afternoons.

Old Traditions

Another goal of the committee, an even more important one Thompson says, is to resurrect old traditions. Senate members recently found logs of past meetings dating to the 30's, 40's and 50's. These serve as a treasure trove of information.

"There's no better place to start than the past and these logs serve as a great model for us," he says. "I'm sure these past students had no idea what kind of record they were leaving for us. Wouldn't it be awesome if we could leave a similar record? And, members of the Class of 2040 or something will look back to 1996 and see what things we were doing."

Thompson and his committee have been trying to identify class leaders from the past. They hope to contact them and learn the traditions of the past.

The committee is chaired by sophomore Ryan Stewart and is made up of sophomores and freshmen. Thompson hopes they will heed his charge, and keep the idea alive to learn these traditions after he graduates in May.

"We have years of history around here. It's just a matter of looking and of turning over the right rocks. We know we'll find out some great things."

*While some march to the beat of a different drummer,
Maryville College students march to the sound of bagpipes and vision.*

From the President

"Making History" was the title of my Opening Convocation address as the Fall '96 term began. As the College community looked together at faces from the 1929 Maryville College yearbook, we reflected on the impact of so many faculty, staff and students pictured there on the history of this College. The Class of 2000, the freshman class entering in Fall '96, I observed that day, is filled with history-makers, too. They are part of a student body that gives Maryville the largest enrollment in its 177-year history, and each and every one has the potential to make a difference in the world and a difference at their college.

The historically-high enrollment makes us optimistic about Maryville's future. But even greater optimism comes from a recognition of the quality education that the Maryville faculty is providing to this record number of students. Our focus is on education for the individual, something that has been a specialty at this College for 177 years. It is education with a purpose, education that is value-based and aimed at preparation for citizenship, leadership and service. We believe that the greatest hope for the world's future lies in producing graduates like Maryville's.

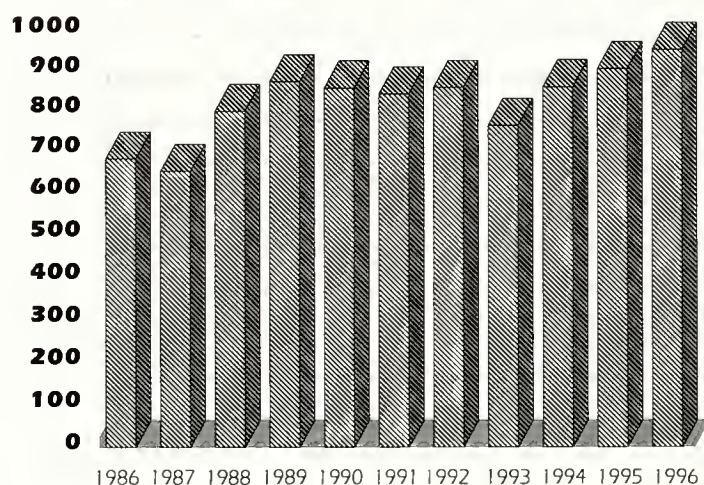

In this historic year we have new construction underway for the first time in over a quarter century. To accommodate the growth in the student body, a new residential village is being built near the spot where Memorial Hall once stood. This is the first project to come from the Campus Master Plan approved by the Board of Directors in April of 1996. Others will follow.

We take pride in the history of Maryville College. But we recognize well that history is also being made now, as we plan and work together to create the future that we mean to claim. The Maryville College 2000 Plan and the Campus Master Plan are our guides to that future. In this 1995-96 President's Report you will see some of the history-makers now at Maryville -- and names of our many partners in providing a quality education for the individuals who will go on to change the world.

Gerald W. Gibson

MC2000 Points of Progress

ENROLLMENT

This fall, Maryville College has reached a record-high enrollment of 927 students. But, there are many other points of progress at the College in an eventful and dynamic year:

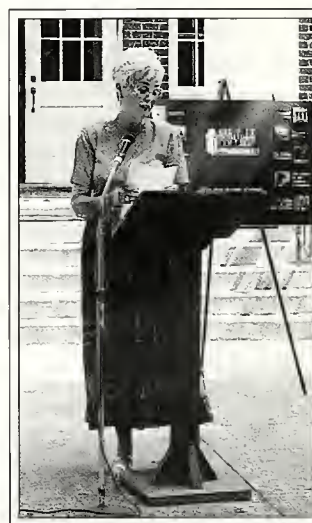

We have launched a new Maryville Curriculum, a program of studies designed to assure in Maryville graduates the knowledge, skills and values that will prepare them for citizenship in the 21st century.

The campus computer network has been extended, and the Sutton computer lab equipped with all new computers.

The campus has been connected to the world through the acquisition of a Maryville College internet node.

Retention has improved steadily.

Along with enrollment growth, there has been a significant improvement in the academic test scores and high school grade-point averages of incoming freshmen, and this fall's freshman class is the best-prepared in more than 20 years.

1995-96 PRESIDENT'S REPORT

ENDOWMENT

In the fiscal year just completed, the endowment grew by $3 million, and gifts to the College reached $3.8 million.

New flower beds and a commitment to campus beautification brought numerous compliments from visitors and neighbors.

A new Campus Master Plan has been approved by the Board of Directors, and will guide the development of campus facilities for the next two decades.

Additional painting, roof repairs and other improvements have begun to address deferred maintenance needs.

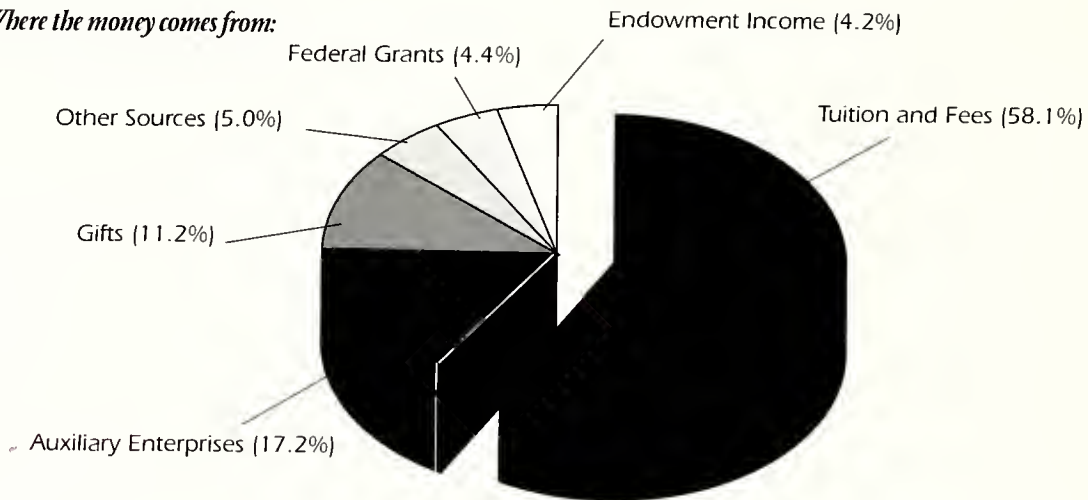

Through a gift from the Class of '46, the Fayerweather Hall interior has been refurbished to serve as the interim student center, pending the construction of a new Student Center before the turn of the century.

Within a few weeks, construction will begin on new residence halls, as we create a new residential village near the spot where Memorial Hall once stood.

ALUMNI NEWS

Upcoming Alumni Events

The Alumni Office is planning events for the Spring of '97 in the following cities:

Los Angeles, Tampa, Asheville, Nashville, Washington, Pittsburgh, Tallahassee, St. Augustine, Philadelphia, Knoxville, Chattanooga, Cincinnati and Atlanta.

Alumni, Parents, and Friends in these areas will receive detailed information including dates and locations of the events. For more information call the Alumni Office at 423/981-8198.

Tailgating in Memphis

The Alumni Office sponsored a "tailgate" reception before the Maryville/Rhodes football game. Although the turnout was light, many alumni joined the crowd at the game. The day was perfect—sunny skies and the SCOTS won the game.

Alumni Gathering in Ohio

Rev. Joe Quinn '61 helped organize a picnic lunch before the Maryville/Wittenberg game in Springfield. A good crowd of alumni, parents and friends gathered to cheer on the SCOTS!

Alumni Board Fall Meeting

The Alumni Board held its fall meeting September 20-21 on the college campus. Jan Dungan '65 presided over the meetings and declared it to be "the best in many years." A new committee structure was implemented to increase board involvement with departments across campus. Some of the meeting highlights included:

- the continued work and improvement of the Alumni Ambassador program
- plans for increasing alumni events across the country

- plans for a readership survey for the publication FOCUS
- recommendation that an alumni column appear in the student publication the ECHO
- decision to re-market the alumni affinity card (VISA from First Tennessee)
- adoption of 43.8% alumni participation goal to the annual fund
- presented the college with $2000 for children of alumni scholarships

The alumni board will meet again in the spring during commencement weekend. Please send suggestions or comments to the Alumni Office.

Homecoming '96

Alumni, parents and friends who returned to campus for Homecoming '96 enjoyed a sunny, crisp fall day with loads of activities. Some of the highlights included:

Academic divisions and administrative departments hosted open houses/receptions across campus with the opportunity to visit with faculty and staff.

The 1946 Maryville College Tangerine Bowl Football Team was honored with a luncheon and half-time presentation. Twenty-two former players attended the event.

A memorial service was held to honor alumni who passed away last year. This event will be held annually.

Dr. Gerald Gibson hosted an "Ask the President" session in Willard House with guests having the opportunity to make comments or ask questions pertaining to the college.

Lunch was served on the grounds and music was provided by the Voices of Praise gospel choir, students Aaron Stone '96 and Dara DiGiacomo '96, and the Maryville College Jazz Band. Gene McCurry '41 was the master of ceremonies.

The annual Harvest Crafts Fair and Bake Sale was held in the Cooper Athletic Center. The event drew a tremendous crowd and proceeds were donated to the College by the Blount County Alumni Chapter to be used for scholarships for Blount County students.
